JUNE is
MEN'S HEALTH MONTH

Mental health is essential to a person's life in the same way as physical health. Hesitation to talk about mental health adds to the notion that the topic is taboo. It is important to normalize conversations surrounding mental health so people can feel empowered to seek the help they need .

- Approximately 33.15 million men in the U.S., representing 19.7%, reported experiencing some form of mental illness in the past year. Stressors such as financial concerns, job-related pressures, and current events can negatively impact men's mental health. Source: NAMI
- Additionally, the risk of suicide is a significant concern for men, with up to 80% of all suicide deaths occurring among males. 6 million American men experience clinical depression annually, and many remain undiagnosed. Source: NAMI
